

COVID19 VS PATENT RIGHTS

The rapid onset of the COVID19 has shown that pandemics and Intellectual Property law are suddenly and massively intertwined. As health care systems struggled to effectively respond to the pandemics, we have witnessed an unprecedented collaborative attitude, ranging from pharmaceutical companies waiving patent rights, to start-ups distributing open-source blueprints for ventilators, cross-countries hackathons and more.

How can innovation be protected and incentivized and still be made globally accessible in order to defeat the COVID19 pandemic?
